San Joaquin Partnership Selects President & CEO

Stockton, CA –San Joaquin Partnership Chairman Kevin Huber has announced the selection of Michael S. Ammann as President & CEO of the economic development organization. Ammann’s official start date will be June 15th.

The San Joaquin Partnership is a non-profit private-public organization with a Board of Directors comprised of both private sector business leaders and public sector elected officials from the County and five of the seven incorporated cities.

In making the announcement, Huber praised Ammann for his extensive experience in economic development.

“Mike Ammann has been president of the Solano Economic Development Corporation, an organization similar to the San Joaquin Partnership, since 2003,” says Huber. “He has more than 25 years experience in economic development including serving as president of Team California, a California membership-based corporation bringing together economic development organizations across the state in a cooperative marketing effort.”

Huber said the Partnership’s Board of Directors has expressed confidence in Ammann’s experience and abilities to lead the Partnership’s job development programs. He referenced the cumulative results of the Partnership’s economic development programs, which over the past twenty years, have generated over 53,700 jobs and more than $12 billion in industry output and labor income combined.
